Bodies Recovered Following Crash of Plane Near Salt Lake City.

FOUR OFFICERS' DIE

Motor Failure Blamed For Accident as Craft Tries to Land.

(By International News Service)

SALT LAKE CITY — Another tragedy of the Wasatch mountains was written today as rescue squads brought out the torn, badly-burned bodies of seventeen persons from a wrecked San Francisco-to-New York airliner—bodies of men in military uniforms, in civilian clothing and in pilots' garb; bodies of three women, and the body of a one-year-old infant boy.

Some of the passengers were on important war-time missions; some were on vital business trips; one, an army private, was en route to his home at Chicago to visit his parents on a brief furlough. Their deaths brought to 61 the number of air travellers killed in the Wasatchs since 1934.

From the flaming wreckage, high above historic Salt Lake City, only one of the occupants was able to drag himself, and he died almost immediately afterward. The first person to reach the wreckage, George Gearhart, yelled to the dazed victim: "Don't give up! I'm coming!"

The victim heard Gearhart. He stretched out an arm in Gearhart's direction. Then he groaned and slumped to the ground.

Gearhart picked up a blanket that had been knocked out of the plane. He ran to place it around the man. But the man died before Gearhart reached him.

Gearhart said the other 16 persons apparently had met instant death.

Among the 14 passengers killed were Lieutenant Commander J. G. Burrows, U. S. N., who was en route to Washington, D. C., and M. L. Patterson and F. B. Vose, connected with the Sperry Gyroscope company which manufactures secret navigation devices for the United Nations' aviation branches.

Besides Lieut. Commander Burrows, the other officers killed were Lieut. Herman J. Frankenburg, U. S. army, and Lieut. C. S. Tucker, U. S. N.

Three women were among the victims, including two women passengers, the infant son of one

MOTHER GRIEVES

Got Son a Place on Plane That Crashed in West.

CHICAGO — (INS) — A Chicago mother today suffered agonies of remorse because she pleaded successfully with United Airlines executives to sell her a seat on a sold-out plane so her soldier son could fly to Chicago from California on his ten-day leave.

The mother was Mrs. Sadie Shapiro, wife of Morris Shapiro, president of Morris Fisheries, incorporated of Chicago. The son was Private Marvin Shapiro, who was killed with 16 others when the plane crashed in Salt Lake City last night.

The family with great difficulty had arranged for his passage, and was expecting to greet him this morning.

INCREASE RATES

Cleveland Publications Cite Higher Production Costs.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Price increases were announced today by Cleveland's three major daily newspapers. The three-cent daily editions of the News, Plain Dealer and Press will be increased to four cents, with six-day home delivery jumping four cents to 22 cents.

The Plain Dealer, only paper with Sunday editions, will raise its ten-cent price to 12 cents. Attributing the price rises to increased production costs, the papers said the new scale, effective Monday, applied to Greater Cleveland.

BOND DRIVE OFF TO GOOD START

1,250 Workers Seek to Get Pledges of 10 Per Cent of Income in Campaign.

The campaign to obtain from every income-earner in Richland county a pledge to put one-tenth of his earnings into war savings bonds or stamps was launched today.

Throughout the county, 1,250 workers started their drive to reach every shop worker, merchant, professional man, farmer, and every other earner. The canvass will end a week from today.

First reports indicated a spirit of enthusiasm and co-operation, according to Paul M. Eliot, Richland county war bond chairman. As an example, one Mansfield resident appeared at Eliot's office bright and early this morning with a facsimile of the pledge card, clipped from last night's News-Journal, with all the blanks filled in. The caller was given a pledge card to fill out, and promptly purchased stamps in the amount listed on the card as a weekly pledge.

The 1,250 workers in the county were directed by Mrs. Louis J. Ott, John L. Catlett, and George B. Ganyard of Mansfield, and John H. Warden of Shelby.

Four booths, sponsored by the Junior Association of Commerce, opened for business at downtown intersections to receive pledges and bond purchase applications, and to sell stamps. American Legion members and Girl Scouts were on duty at the booths today, and representatives of other organizations will man the booths daily throughout the period of the canvass.

Richland county's quota of bond and stamp purchases for May was established by the Treasury Department at $295,200. June and July quotas will be larger, Eliot was advised.

Disorderly House Operators Heeding Ban, Chief Asserts

Mansfield police reported today that the closing of houses of prostitution in the city in line with War department orders to stamp out brothels within 50 miles of a new Army training camp at Bucyrus, is proceeding without difficulty.

Police Chief Thomas M. Bell said that operators of the houses were co-operating and that no trouble had been experienced as yet.

"If it will help win the war," Chief Bell quoted them as saying, "we're willing to go."

Chief Bell said that police had encountered minor opposition among colored operators, some expressing reluctance to comply with the new order.

"After next week, we're going to start checking these places," said Chief Bell, "and any persons found operating the houses will be brought into municipal court."

CHARGED AS EVADER

YOUNGSTOWN — (AP) — Roland Allman, 23, Lake Milton, who contends he should be exempt from military service because he is a conscientious objector and a member of Jehovah's Witnesses, was held for the federal grand jury today under $1,500 bond on charges of draft evasion.

Probe Blast That Killed 8 Women In Signal Plant

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — In a twisted, broken mass of steel and timber, federal and state authorities today sought the cause of the explosion yesterday in the torpedo room of the Central Railway Signal company in Versailles borough, near McKeesport, that sent eight women to their deaths and injured a dozen others, at least seven seriously.

FBI agents reportedly were withdrawn from the investigation after it was learned that the company was not engaged in war work. The plant manufactures railroad torpedoes, flares and other signal devices.

Dozens of the potash and sulphur torpedoes manufactured in the plant were said to have been imbedded in the broken bodies taken to the morgue. Throngs of weeping relatives milled around in the morgue last night, identifying as best as possible, their kin.

FBI Hints Saboteurs Started $2,000,000 Forest Fire.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. — (INS) — Three Rhode Island towns were under martial law today while thousands of men stood guard over the Woodlands in the southwestern section of the state to combat further spread of $2,000,000 forest fire which roared through 50 square miles and destroyed at least 20 houses before being brought under control.

Federal bureau of investigation agents and state officials indicated the possibility that the fires were started by saboteurs. The FBI was called into action because 250,000 feet of government stored lumber was destroyed.

SENIORS WIN ON TROUSER EDICT

White Flannels Out For School Commencements In Columbus.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Senior boys in Columbus high schools today won their fight against compulsory white trouser attire for June commencement exercises.

Supt. George E. Roudebush said the white trouser order had been rescinded and that seniors may wear "any dark suit" at commencement.

He said white flannels, which the seniors objected to on grounds of expense, probably would be prohibited so the schools could have uniform graduation attire.

SETS UP NINE DEFENSE AREAS

Hout, County Chairman, Says Purchase of Raid Sirens to Be Studied at Session.

Nine civilian defense districts were set up today in Richland county by Ray Hout, county defense chairman, who said he would call the county committee into session Wednesday night to approve the district set-up and complete plans for getting the defense program in operation here.

Hout said he would ask the chairmen of the boards of trustees in the townsips making up the districts to meet within a few days to form district sub-units to work with the county organization.

Scheduled for discussion at the Wednesday night meeting will be the purchase of air raid sirens and other equipment necessary to the civilian defense program, appointment of air raid wardens, and a general plan for civilian activities.

Districts as set up by Hout for approval by the county committee include:

1—Mansfield, Madison township, and Mifflin township; 2—Shelby, Jackson township, and Sharon township; 3—Plymouth village, Plymouth township, and Cass township; 4—Bloominggrove, Butler, Franklin, and Weller townships.

5—Springfield and Sandusky townships; 6—Lexington, Troy township, and the western half of Washington township; 7—Lucas, Monroe township, and the eastern half of Washington township; 8—Bellville, Jefferson township, and Perry township; Butler village and Worthington township.

"We may have to do some shifting of townships later to speed up organization work; but that will be left for the county committee to decide Wednesday night," Hout said.

Manhattanites Take To Elevators as WLB Settles Strike.

NEW YORK —(INS)— More than 100,000 tenants of New York City's upper west side were riding the elevators again today after the one-day May Day strike was halted at the request of the war labor board.

The strike was called off three hours after Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia proclaimed an "emergency affecting the public health" and ordered the department of public health to take charge.

RAF BOMBERS BLAST NAZI DESTROYER

Score Hit on Ship During Raid Off Norway Coast; Rip French Airdromes.

ENGLAND UNRAIDED

Russians Claim Guerrillas Slay 5,000 Germans Near Orel.

(By United Press)

LONDON — Coastal command planes scored a hit on a German destroyer off the Norwegian coast during the night and fighter planes attacked enemy airdromes in Occupied France, the air ministry announced today.

An American made Lockheed Hudson bomber dropped two bombs on the destroyer's deck, the air ministry said.

Bad weather kept British long range bombers grounded for the second straight night, but the coast command planes fought through rain and clouds to reach the Norwegian coast, attacking shipping and hit the destroyer.

Loss of one coastal command plane was admitted.

For the first time in 11 days of merciless war in the air, the air ministry had reported that there were no German planes over Britain during the night.

The Germans had lost at least 24 bombing planes in eight days over Great Britain, in addition to many which probably crashed on the way home, and as the total of their raiding planes probably did not exceed 200, they may have decided that the penalty for the deliberate bombing of non-military British towns was too expensive.

British planes fought through rain over the English channel last evening in numbers which astonished coastal observers, to attack the Le Havre-Cape Gris Nez area on the French side, railroad yards and the station at St Omer and various targets in Occupied France.

Eight British fighter planes were lost and one German fighter was downed. One British pilot was saved.

American-made Boston bombers took a big part in the St. Omer raid and other attacks on occupied territory.

The air ministry said today that photographs taken by the new British reconnaissance planes which are so fast they can fly

Sugar Registration Program For Consumers Complete.

James Bailey, county rationing coordinator, reported today that all arrangements were complete in Richland county for the registration of sugar consumers, which starts Monday.

The four-day registration will be at elementary schools in the county. Elementary and junior high school teachers will serve as registrars.

Sale of sugar is frozen but will be resumed on Tuesday. After that time, the limit for individuals will be one-half pound a week. Even those who have a supply of sugar on hand should register, Bailey said, because the rationing books they will receive will be used later for other commodities.

City Gives Colored Draftees Big Send-Off at Party Today

One of the most enthusiastic send-offs since the inauguration of a civic farewell for Richland county men leaving for service was staged this morning when a small contingent of colored selectees departed for an Army induction center.

In response to an appeal by Earl Saltzgaber, chairman of the Richland Victory Civic Committee, for as large a turn-out as at previous send-offs, close to 2,000 persons were on hand.

The crowd was made of relatives and friends of the selectees, plus hundreds of others who weren't acquainted with any members of the contingent but who wanted the opportunity to give them a friendly pat on the back and a cheery farewell.

They jammed the street in front of the Richland Trust building, where a bus picked up the contingent at 8:15. It was a spirited throng, and there seemed to be fewer tears than at previous send-offs.

The nattily-uniformed band of Westinghouse Local 711 provided stirring martial music, and got a big hand from the crowd. It was the band's second appearance at a send-off this week.

The departing selectees, less than a score in number, nevertheless comprised the largest group of colored boys to leave Mansfield for Army service since the draft started. The group was, however, the smallest contingent to receive a send-off since adoption of the custom on March 24, and the enthusiasm this morning demonstrated convincingly that residents

Dispute Delays Opening of AAA Marketing Vote

Voting in the wheat marketing quota referendum in Richland county was delayed two hours this morning when members of the Marketing Quota Protest association and county AAA committeemen engaged in a dispute over the eligibility of scores of farmers to ballot on the quota issue.

Government regulations prohibit farmers who seeded less than 15 acres of wheat this year to participate in the voting, but a large number of farmers with wheat allotments as low as three acres demanded the right to vote, County AAA Chairman Guy L. Taylor said.

Polls in Mansfield, Shelby, and three other county communities were not opened until 10, a. m., when it was decided to permit the protesting farmers to vote under challenge, Taylor said. Voting was scheduled to begin at 8 a. m. Polls will be open until 6 p. m.

Taylor said he would obtain an opinion from state AAA headquarters before the votes are tabulated tonight. Envelopes con-

Cairo Reports U. S. Troops Work in Eritrea.

CAIRO—(U.P.)—American service troops now are stationed in the Middle East, Maj.-Gen. Russell L. Maxwell said today.

Maxwell, who has been in charge of U. S. supplies and maintenance of U. S. planes for the Royal Air Force, also announced that the U. S. technical school for the training of maintenance personnel was being turned over to the RAF. Construction of American projects in Eritrea also are underway, he said.

Maxwell said that the technical school was staffed by Americans who instructed RAF technicians until they were sufficiently schooled to become instructors themselves.

Mansfield Draftee In Hospital With Bullet Wound In Arm.

Anderson Chick, rear 280 North Franklin avenue, who was scheduled to leave Mansfield this morning with a contingent of colored selectees, is in General hospital with a bullet wound in his left forearm.

Chick told police he was packing a pistol with his belongings in preparation for his departure, when the gun exploded. He suffered only a flesh wound, and will leave for camp when he has recovered draft officials said.

BRITISH FALLING BACK

Allies Unofficially Admit Capture of Burma City as Enemy Drives on.

(By United Press)

An early major test of American land, sea and air forces against the Japanese in the Australian zone was predicted freely today following the enemy's rapid drive into key Burma cities, apparently including Mandalay.

Allied air forces under Gen. Douglas MacArthur attacked the Japanese invasion base at the New Britain port of Gasmata in a continuation of their steady pounding at the enemy spearheads and downed another raider over Port Moresby.

Fighting still was in progress on a front stretching across north central Burma, but the Japanese reported they had captured the ancient and bomb-wrecked city of Mandalay and this was acknowledged unofficially by Allied sources although official confirmation was lacking.

Chungking reported British and Chinese troops are fighting desperately in the suburbs of Mandalay to hold a powerful Japanese force which had charged with breath-taking swiftness against the city, Allied military sources said today.

(Japanese imperial headquarters asserted that Japanese forces had captured Mandalay. The claim, broadcast by Tokyo, was heard by CBS at San Francisco.)

Dispatches from the front indicated that fighting was ferocious and it was admitted here that the outnumbered, tiring British empire and Chinese troops were fighting a delaying action.

Thus it was implied that hope of a successful defense of Mandalay, famed for its beauty and until recently the chief Allied base for the Burma front, had been abandoned.

Gurkha troops of the Indian army had made a gallant if vain stand 20 miles below Mandalay.

A British military commentator in London admitted today that the Japanese might have occupied Mandalay.

Mayor Silent on Trip; Admits It Was City Business

Mayor W. J. Locke said today that he had been in Columbus yesterday on city business but that "he couldn't discuss just what the business was."

Employes in the mayor's office were unintormed of the mayor's mission to Columbus yesterday, saying that they had received a telephone call from the mayor's daughter that he had gone there but that they did not know the reason for the trip.

When questioned today, Mayor Locke said that his office knew why he was in Columbus yesterday but that "they probably didn't care to give out the information."

A check with Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff and others in the mayor's office again today showed that the employes did not know why the mayor was in Columbus.

Mayor Locke returned home from Washington, D. C., Tuesday night after a trip to attempt to get War Production board officials to relax priorities restrictions preventing the city from purchasing a new fire truck, fire hose and two new garbage trucks.

Since his return, he has been collecting data to bolster his plea for relaxation of the restrictions. Other city officials stated today that the mayor may have been conferring with a fire truck manufacturer in Columbus to help in the collection of data on the city's need for a new pumper.

Read About 'Hotel' For Cats Sunday

While you're saving tires by relaxing on the front porch or the side lawn tomorrow you can take a deck chair trip with the Sunday News-Journal to one of the most interesting farms in Richland county.

It boasts a "hotel" for cats and a century-old water-powered flour mill that now produces electric current.

Without moving from your easy chair, why not visit the Ohio State Reformatory, too, via the Sunday edition and see what staff and inmates are doing to help the nation's war effort?

It's surprising what reporter and camera have found the inmates doing in the way of equipping themselves for service after release, and equally surprising the contributions they have already made toward helping the war.

Reading what OSR is doing may fire you with ambition to get right up and do more yourself, but wait a minute. The Sunday edition also reveals: How soldiers are turning to the Home Service department of Richland county chapter of the Red Cross in emergencies. . . . How the city's parks are being prepared for an expected record season this summer. . . . And what a former Mansfielder, now one of the nation's leading authorities on Lincoln, has to say about recent discoveries concerning the famed Gettysburg address. . . .

Good Sunday fare, too, is the story about how the United States is caring for interned diplomats of enemy countries. "Interned" is hardly the word; you can make up your own description after reading tomorrow's story.

THE WAR TODAY

By De WITT MacKENZIE
(Wide World War Analyst)

There is a growing feeling among military observers that an answer to the Russian appeal for the opening of a second front in western Europe may be developing through the daring and devastating raids on the continent by the tough British commandos, coupled with the heavy air offensive which has been opened against the Nazis by the Royal Air Force, with American airmen already participating.

The expectation is that these astonishing sorties by the blackface commandos will increase. General George C. Marshall, United States chief of staff, in northern Ireland recently, declared that American troops "inevitably will join the commandos.

It is likely that as conditions warrant we shall see not only one but several raids simultaneously up and down the continental coast, destroying strong enemy positions and prodding for weak points in the German defenses.

Some day one of these raids will capture a port, and the commandos will get their feet firmly enough on the ground so that they can stick in the face of enemy counter-attacks.

That will provide a spearhead which can be followed up quickly with other troops and equipment. When we reach that happy day the invasion probably will be on, and it will have been inaugurated without risking a big army, an armanda of transports, a massed naval force and a vast air fleet all at one time.

Before such an operation can be successful, however, the British and American air-fighters must secure control of the air over western Europe. The Royal Air Force already has superiority, but it hasn't that supremacy which would enable it to give complete protection to a large scale land invasion. The Anglo-American forces are storming the German skies now not only to destroy war production and other military objectives but to wrest supremacy from the Nazi fliers.

Commando type of warfare is one of the remarkable developments of the war. The idea of using small, self-contained units for daring expeditions isn't new, of course, for our famous marines have been doing that sort of fighting ever since their foundation.

Parachute troops, such as the Germans used to capture Crete, also are a piece off the same cloth. However, the British have adapted the scheme to make it applicable to their entire army, which is being trained on this line.

Thus out of this innovation we may get one of the historic developments of military history, and one which will play a great part in the outcome of the war.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Meet The Girls.

IF THERE was any wine being drunk out of slippers in this season of tire rationing, skyscraper taxes and bonds for victory, it probably would be sipped from the sandals of the gayest and most glamorous sextet in current night life—the Samba Sirens.

Kilgallen

They are the nearest thing in town to the Floradora Girls of grandpop's memories—scented, befurred, besieged by stage door Johns; they know the middle name of every wolf in town, resident and transient; they know the shortest distance between a dream prince and a diamond bracelet.

The Samba Sirens dance and swish and stroll at the Copacabana, and Samba is not a very good word for them because they do not samba and they have nothing to do with countries where the samba is done. They come from Victoria, Texas, and Brooklyn, U. S. A., and points in between.

Siren is the better word for them. They were taught to be sirens by Don Loper, with a little help from Mother Nature, of course.

Loper, dancer and designer, tells them what to wear, how to wind their turbans, how to paint their fingernails, how to dress their hair, and what to hang from their ears. He is the Svengali who has changed the six Trilbys from pretties to pretty smoothies.

Oh, siren is much the better word for them.

What about them?

Let's start with Ruth Brady, because she is first in alphabetical order and because she comes from Brooklyn

Ruth is a lush blonde with hazel eyes and a twinkle. Daughter of an Irishman and a Viennese, she is superstitious as a banshee and chic as a mannequin When she first looked at Jimmy Stewart, she decided to marry him, and although she has not progressed very far in the direction of that goal, she is still firmly convinced that he's her future husband

A two-foot-high picture of Jimmy decorates the wall of her dressing room and one night when some joker took it down she was so crushed and tearful she couldn't go on for the show.

Mary Virginia Morris is the tallest and the nicest of the Loperized lovelies. She's the brown-eyed brunette kid from Victoria, Texas, who is still awed by the big city and still retains her genial Texas cordiality, with a large smile for practically anybody.

Mary Virginia — that's her Texas callin' name—is the ballet queen of the ensemble, having cavorted with the Metropolitan Opera ballet company for two years. She is also, paradoxically, the most ardent jitterbug of the group.

She likes to read biographies, is convent-bred, and owns a ranch deep in the heart of you-know-where.

She doesn't smoke or drink and doesn't believe girls ought to drink. Mary Virginia glides gayly through a town of wolves as if the wolves were all lambs.

Irene Vernon comes from a town that sounds like a gag writer made it up—Mishawaka, Ind. Her mother wanted her to be an actress, and Irene is trying hard.

A streak of domesticity surprising in a chorine runs through Irene. She can cook a mean apple pie. But her real pastime is collecting trinkets—diamonds, for instance.

She likes Havana because she became engaged to a Cuban sugar planter while she worked at the National Casino there.

The girl with the exotic face is Virginia Wilson, who would have been a sensation in the Theda Bara era. She's the screwball of the group, combining her zaniness with a slinky, out-of-the-world appearance, including foot-long cigaret holders and green fingernail polish. She likes Dali—and Dali would certainly like her.

She can pilot a plane or drive a racing car, and they say she is a relative of Napoleon.

Pat Patrick is the Samba Siren whose main topic of conversation is the male sex. She's the Minneapolis kid who made good this Christmas with a silver fox coat. She has a naturally sweet disposition, a lot of energy and something that makes visiting male movie stars look at her.

She has explored New York systematically, from the bus tops to the Statue of Liberty. She gets a tremendous kick out of being in Manhattan, being a part of the world she read about in O. O. McIntyre's column when she was a kid in Minneapolis

RAPS 'QUICKIE' COMMISSIONS FOR CIVILIANS

Legislator Gets Amendment Requiring Officers To Have Training.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Rep. Charles I. Faddis (D.-Pa.), chairman of a house subcommittee on army matters, declared today there was a growing practice of giving army and navy "quickie" commissions to unqualified civilians and said he would insist that congress stop such action in the future.

At Faddis' request, the full house military committee has written into the pending army pay bill an amendment requiring that future commissions be granted only to graduates of officers' training schools, national guard and R. O. T. C. officers, or those who have completed military courses at approved schools.

Faddis, who served as a lieutenant-colonel in the last war, said he would fight to the last ditch on the house floor to retain the amendment.

He said he had learned that approximately 100 civilian boards had been set up recently to recommend men for commissions in air corps ground forces but had ceased to operate. He and other members of the committee said they could find little information about the boards, and one member asserted they had been organized so quietly the general public was not even aware of their existence.

These civilian boards, he said, had obtained commisisons for many men without any previous military training to do ground administrative work. "Friends and neighbors" of board members, Faddis said, have been highly successful in obtaining commissions.

"There are entirely too many of these commisisons being issued," he complained. "It may be true that in certain cases a man from civilian life is needed for a commissioned post, but there is no reason to commission a thousand of them."

Faddis said his amendment would have no effect on persons already commissioned from civilian life, but definitely would stop the issuance of such commissions in the future. Had it been in effect earlier, he said, sports figures, movie stars and business leaders such as William S. Knudsen could not have been given high commissions. Knudsen, production director for the army, holds a commission as a lieutenant-general.

USO Workers in County To Seek $22,000 Goal.

The Richland county United Service organization will put its campaign machinery into motion Monday and set up plans for the county-wide drive for $22,000 that will come in June.

George H. Smith, chairman of the county organization, said today that $2,000 has been added to the original goal of $20,000 established by national headquarters in accordance with a ruling that permits the county organization to raise 10 per cent of the goal for its own canteen use.

Plans for the establishment of a canteen in Mansfield where boys home on leave may meet and enjoy each other's companionship will be discussed at the Monday meeting called for 7:30 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

The county drive will likely be held the first week in June, Smith said.

PREDICT HIKE IN U. S. COSTS

Officials See Payroll Up 50 Millions in Handling Price Controls.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Government officials predicted today that the federal payroll will jump more than $50,000,000-a-year as the result of creation of large field staffs to administer the vast price control, rent and rationing programs.

Those who made the estimate said it was conservative. They forecast that more than 40,000 persons will be hired soon, between 20,000 and 30,000 of them for the price control and rationing programs. Between 85 and 95 percent of new employes, according to informed spokesmen at the U. S. civil service commission, will be scattered in regional, state, and district and local offices throughout the country.

The $50,000,000, it was declared, represented only payrolls alone and does not include funds which must be spent for office rents, equipment and other supplies.

There have been tremendous increases in federal employment since the national defense program was launched in June, 1940, according to a survey. The total increase was 802,336 from 1,002,820 in the 1940 month to the latest figure of 1,805,186, including both workers in Washington and in the field.

The office of emergency management, under which President Roosevelt has placed most war agencies like the war production board and the office of price administration, had more than 17,000 workers in February, more than 9,000 of them in the WPB. Officials expected that the OPA itself would have before July 1 more workers than the entire OEM now, if help can be recruited that quickly.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Frank O'Neil, 20-year-old Fordham university sophomore, was dead today because of his bravado in playing "Russian roulette."

O'Neil was in the bedroom of his Brooklyn home demonstrating the game to a friend. The five-to-one gamble on life was lost.

2,991 DEAD, 907 MISSING SAYS REPORT

Nearly 2,500 Missing Since Pearl Harbor Attack; All States Hit.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — In the first overall tabulation of known American casualties in World War II, the navy today listed 6,393 bluejackets, marines and coast guardsmen representing every state in the union as dead, missing or wounded as the result of "direct action with the enemy" in approximately four months of fighting on scattered fronts.

Covering the period from the Japanese surprise attack upon Pearl Harbor Dec. 7 to April 15 this year, the navy report classified the casualties as follows: dead, 2,991; missing, 2,495 and wounded, 907. Subsequent reports may boost these totals.

"The preponderant share of these casualties resulted from direct action with the enemy," the navy said, "but included in the total are names of those who were lost in accidents at sea and in the air on duty directly connected with wartime operations."

Men from the 48 states as well as Alaska, Panama, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines made up the casualty list, a veritable cross-section of American youth who have been fighting heroically against the Axis powers on scattered fronts throughout the world.

No breakdown was offered by the navy on the number of casualties in various war theaters, but the all-inclusive list embraces fighting against Axis submarine raiders in the Atlantic and aganst Japanese forces in Hawaii, Wake, Guam, the Philippines and the southwest Pacific.

The total does not include United States army casualties. To date the war department officially has announced the death of 283 officers and enlisted men. In addition, more than 35,000 American-Filipino troops were presumed captured in the fall of Bataan peninsula in the Philippines.

Of those listed by the navy as dead, the majority, about 2,000, were killed in the surprise Japanese attack upon Pearl Harbor.

Many of those listed as missing also are presumed to be dead, some in action during the furious battle of Java. For example, approximately 1,200 were believed to have been lost in the sinking in the southwest Pacific of the Aircraft Tender Langley and the Naval Tanker Pecos.

Included in the list of missing are more than 400 marines who held out so valiantly on Wake island for two weeks early in the war but finally were overwhelmed by Japanese forces and are presumed to be dead or prisoners of war.

(By Associated Press)

SPRINGFIELD — Six men escaped from the Clark county jail today after one slugged a jailer shortly before dawn. One was recaptured within a few hours.

Sheriff's Deputy Ralph Estel, 35, was in Springfield City hospital with head bruises suffered in the break.

He said he was hit over the head by Melvin Blanton, 30, of Hamilton, who locked the jailer in a kitchen. Estel was the only guard on duty at the time of the break.

Officials said the fugitives with Blanton were: Ralph Crua, 24, of Dayton, parole violator; Clovis Cowell, 21, and Howard F. Welch, 26, awaiting grand jury action on charges of burglarzing a Springfield cafe; and Harry L. Davis, 21, charged with auto theft.

Garland Thompson, Indianapolis, held for transporting a stolen auto across a state line, was recaptured quickly.

The attack on Estel was made when he went to the cell block to release Lawrence Gillispie, 26, of Cleveland on bond. Gillispie had been detained on a vagrancy count.

As Mansfield Colored Selectees Leave for Army Induction

of the county have taken the send-off idea to their hearts

The selectees virtually had to run a gauntlet of well-wishers who lined the path from the sidewalk to the bus. Their progress was slow, for it appeared that everyone in the group closest at hand desired to clap them on the back, or throw their arms about their necks, or deliver a farewell kiss.

There was a moment of silence when Herbie Williams, who was appointed leader of the contingent, reached the step of the bus after helping draft board officials to check in the selectees.

Standing on the step of the bus, Williams raised his hand for quiet, and then he said:

"I just want to say, folks, that these fellows from Mansfield are going to do their very best."

It was a short speech, but to the listeners it was an eloquent expression of the determination of these boys to do their share in this job of war. A rousing cheer went up from the crowd

Then, to the strains of the national anthem, the bus drew away and Send-off No 6 in the Richland county chapter of the story of World War 2 was over.

The next three send-offs will be staged on successive days in several weeks. Details will be announced later.

taining the ballots voted by farmers with less than 15 acres of wheat were being marked so they can be held out tonight should they be ruled illegal, the chairman explained. Three opponents of the quotas were on duty as challengers at each of the five voting places.

Voting before noon today was heavier than last year, Taylor said. He attributed the increased interest to the campaign waged by opponents of the government wheat and corn quotas which limit the amount of grain farmers can sell without penalty.

A two-thirds approval vote throughout the nation will be necessary to continue the quotas which AAA officials argued are needed to keep the price of wheat at a reasonable level and avoid overloading the nation's transportation and storage facilities.

See Heavier Nazi Clamp Over Italy

LONDON —(INS)— The recent conference at Salzburg between Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini will result in greater German control over Italy, informed circles in London said today.

In pointing out that Mussolini is playing an increasingly subservient role in the Axis set-up, observers cited a Rome radio announcement shortly after the Salzburg meeting, held last Wednesday and Thursday, which disclosed that "another large batch of German police arrived in Rome Friday."

Il Duce summoned a session of the council of ministers immediately upon his return to hear what the British press called "Hitler's instructions."

Evidence of further German control in Italy was seen in the announcement of Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor, that thousands more of German troops would move into Italy while part of the Italian army will be sent to the Russian front.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1942.

Drive carefully tomorrow—your margin of safety on those tires has worn off just a little more.

Now they're talking about a possible two hundred billion national debt—but, somehow, billions are beginning to seem unimportant.

While we're still wondering whether Washington really cut down a cherry tree it may be just as well to make it clear that President Roosevelt was joking when he said that MacArthur rowed a boat from Bataan to Australia.

Britton Speaks to France

A BRITISH RADIO which speaks to the conquered countries of Europe through the voice of a man who calls himself "Col. Britton" is cutting through the silence which Hitler tries to maintain between the nationals of those countries and those who seek to be their deliverers.

Experiments have been performed of late in an effort to find out how well the British radio is heard in France and how seriously it is taken. On a certain day, a few months ago, Frenchmen were asked to stay indoors at a certain hour. At that time the streets were empty.

They were asked not to travel on a certain day—and did not do so. Now the voice promises to give them a signal within six weeks. They are to be calm and quiet meanwhile, but be ready to strike when they are given the word. The outer world joins France in awaiting that signal with eagerness.

It is one hundred and fifty years since Rouget de l'Isle wrote the Marsellaise. This time it will not be the Frenchman who will "rock the wide fields with his voice of flame" but a matter-of-fact British voice speaking a code word through the most modern of tricky gadgets. But when that word comes, Hitler and his chiseling Laval had better look out. For when Frenchmen are really aroused, blood flows in a torrent through the furrows.

Write Oftener To Service Men

ASKED what they most want from home, the boys overseas shout one word: "Letters!" Home folks are urged to write more and more to boys in service.

It takes a long time to get letters to Australia. The news is already old when it arrives. But if another letter is coming off the next ship, it's all right. The boys are not homesick in any weakening sense of the word, but they are a long way from home and they want to maintain in full strength the bonds that bind them to the home community.

So write by all means, write early, write often, to every boy you know. His mother will write, even if it's hard for her to say things on paper. Wife or sweetheart will write, though they, too, have difficulty in saying things they want to say without having the written words sound foolish. But the boys also want to hear from friends in office and factory. They want to know how everything is going in the "old dump" where they worked. They think of the old place with a good deal of longing and affection these days.

No girl need fear to be considered boy-crazy if she writes jolly, impersonal letters to the lad from her street. Everybody knows she's just doing her good deed. The neighbors will enjoy the ones she gets in return.

But make packages small, please. Send big ones to boys in camp here. But ship space and tonnage are needed for shells, plane parts and food. Use it sparingly.

Peruvian Cotton

ABOUT 200,000 bales of cotton per year will be purchased from Peru while the war lasts, says the secretary of agriculture. This will replace the market lost by Peru because of the war.

The Peruvian government is trying to induce planters to shift to flax, rice, beans and other food crops needed by the United Nations during the war, so there will be less cotton surplus and more of the varied and needed foods and fibers. It will raise the base price to growers of cotton in proportion to decrease in area planted after 1942, decreasing the base price in similar proportion to increase in area.

It is interesting to see the Peruvians adopting some of the devices used by our own department of agriculture. Many experiments have been performed in years gone by to deal with farm surpluses, and none have been perfectly satisfactory. But as the nations of the earth become more closely interlocked, as knowledge spreads of what is needed and what is likely to be excessive in any given year, agricultural planning may be more successful than it has ever been in the past.

It seems likely that greater variety of crops is one of the answers for the individual farmer, and that more industrial farming — which spreads the diversity from food into materials used in industry, is another.

Will Growth Stop By 1980?

ONE of the subjects for interesting discussion, when nothing more momentous is at hand, has to do with the somewhat pessimistic prediction that population of the United States will reach a standstill by 1980, at around 153,000,000, and will thereafter stay at approximately that point—or possibly decrease.

This theory is apparently based largely on the 1940 census, which showed an increase of only seven per cent in the preceding decade, or less than half the gain from 1920 to 1930.

Sensibly restricted immigration, and economic considerations which tended to reduce the average size of families, are more likely causes of the 1930 to 1940 small percentage of population gain than other factors, and it may also appear that growth was as rapid as educational and other civilizing influences were capable of extending.

A fair estimate of the agricultural and industrial productive potentialities of the United States, supplemented by exchange with other nations under conditions of a world at peace, seems to present no unsurmountable obstacles to a self-sustaining population of as much as 500,000,000 within the continental confines of this country—all enjoying the essentials of comfortable living and the liberties accorded under principles of democracy.

That, at least, is a more pleasant future to contemplate than a static state by 1980.

Picked up and passed along: "Government has no money to pay anybody anything until it first collects it from the people. Government is merely an agent of the people. Every bit of waste by government, industry or labor, comes out of the pockets of the people."

"OLD MAN OF THE MOUNTAIN"

Labor Draft Brings Problems

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

Labor's to be parcelled out on a priority basis, beginning soon. As chairman of the recently created War Manpower commission, Paul V. McNutt will manage the job.

The workers won't have much to say about their various assignments. They will go wherever Paul tells 'em to go.

Rather peculiarly a good many of them want to get into the military service but aren't permitted to join up because the manpower board needs 'em worse for industrial production.

They're conscripted all right, but it's conscription for factory tasks and away from the army. The latter is the outfit they'd prefer to be mustered into, at a lot more personal risk and a great deal less pay.

Plants, it appears, are numerous enough and are adequately equipped to deliver emergency supplies in materially larger volume and at a decidedly swifter rate than they're doing it now, but their managements can't get the skilled hands required to operate 'em at their maximum capacities.

Employment of women is expected to relieve the situation very much presently, but recruiting and organizing 'em takes a bit of time and it will take still more to train most of them at technical crafts, and time's at a fierce premium today. Hence evolution of the idea to adapt priorities to the allocation of labor as well as commodities.

Transportation Is Tough.

Transportation facilities are another headache to emergency officialdom. It's pretty aggravating to have wartime products finished and ready for utilization, but piled up at shipping points for lack of means to move 'em to other places where they're in urgent demand.

Building's a problem, too.

All our emergency industries have to have roofs over 'em, at least.

Our cities, where it's convenient to provide them, are entirely unprepared to assimilate 'em.

They're generally congested already.

Besides, where'll all our war workers in these industries, be housed, with their families? Right around, in the neighborhood? No, no, that wouldn't do. As a result of the tearing-down, nothing would be left but slums. Washington's an example of it.

You might say that the populace could protect its health by moving, residentially, out into the suburbs.

But, once more, we get back to the transportation proposition.

How are these workers, with their flivvers put out of commission for the duration, to get from home to their jobs and back home again?

Industry is solving the puzzle to some extent.

It's doing it by moving its plants into the cities' outskirts and encouragaing their workers to flock their homes around, in their various neighborhoods.

Listen World!

Your Story and Mine

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

WITH delight and gratitude, I read a little piece of folklore in the Reader's Digest of April. Not only is it a great story in itself but it fits the pattern of every life that reaches maturity. We need to know that pattern these days, you and I. If we are to survive we must know ourselves. And this is the story of ourselves.

Long ago, the story goes, a great artist was commissioned to paint a mural for a church. The subject was to be the life of Christ. For years he worked with fervor and devotion, but there came a time when his brush faltered. Two faces eluded him — that of the young Christ and that of Judas Iscariot. Finally one day in a gang of playing urchins, he came upon a young face so beautiful, so pure in its innocence, that it bore the stamp of Christ Himself. And so for days the youngster posed in his studio while the facile hands set down the dreams and purity of youth—the spark that God had planted in our common clay.

Then again came a pause of years. No model could be found for that mingled mask of shrewdness and weakness which was the face of Judas Iscariot. The artist was in despair. He was growing old with his mural still unfinished. But read these paragraphs from "Reader's Digest:"

"Then one afternoon as he sat in a tavern over his daily glass of wine, a gaunt and tattered figure staggered across the threshold and fell upon the floor. 'Wine, wine!' he begged. The painter lifted him up and looked into a face that startled him. It seemed to bear the marks of every sin of mankind.

"Greatly excited, the old artist lifted the profligate to his feet. 'Come with me,' he said, 'and I will give you wine and food and clothing'."

And so began the painting of the scarred and dreadful face of Judas, the man who had sold his Christ. Day by day it proceeded in all its sordidness, all its failure and frustration, all its unquenchable despair.

Into the painting the artist poured all his soul. But his was not the only soul that throbbed under that inspired brush. Came the hour when the derelict on the model's seat bent his shamed head, broke into sobs. Startled, the artist asked him what troubled him. Trembling, faltering with an incurable despair and regret, the blurred eyes lifted, the scarred mouth faltered: "Do you not then remember me? Years ago I was your model for the Christ child."

THERE is your story. There is mine. In each of us they live together, the Christ and Judas Iscariot. The One who bore the cross—the one who sold Him for thirty pieces of silver.

I am writing this with Good Friday fresh in my mind. There may be only one Good Friday on the calendar but every day is Good Friday for those of us who have really lived. For every day, in our anguish, we know we have sold the Christ by some cruel or indifferent act . . . and every day in one healing glimpse . . . whether we be beggars or thieves or fools . . . we know that we would give all we have to lift His cross as He stumbles to Calvary.

Mr. Muste Leads Astray.

All cats are grey at night, but it might be difficult even for a trained psychologist to see in broad daylight why the Rev. A. J. Muste refused to register with all other men of middle age for possible selective service in war-time industry.

Mr. Muste, 57 years old, wrote from New York to Attorney General Biddle that his conscience would not permit him to register and that the draft was "a great step toward a regime of totalitarianism."

Since Mr. Muste once was a leader of the Trotzky wing of the Communist movement in the United States, he may have some first hand information about totalitarianism which is not available to the people generally. If he has learned, by experience or otherwise, to fear totalitarianism, why should he not now line up with good American citizens to defeat Hitler and Hirohito, the leaders of totalitarianism who would shackle the clergy and impose their form of government upon the United States in substitution for the Constitution and the Bill of Rights if they win the war.

No, Mr. Muste, we don't follow you nor your organization, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, if the name signifies reconciliation with anything faintly resembling the policies of the Axis bosses.—Toledo Blade.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Roosevelt's Warning and Hitler's Anguish Week's Biggest News

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

LIKE nothing else in five months of war, this fireside chat brought the war to the firesides of America. As the president acknowledged, his seven-part strategy for busting the bronco of spiraling living costs affected every single American.

Such an abrupt transformation in America's economy meant that thousands, perhaps millions, of citizens would be bruised. Mr. Roosevelt was frank in conceding that "our standard of living will have to come down."

His program called for (1) vastly heavier taxes, (2) ceilings on prices and rents, (3) stabilization of wages, (4) lower ceilings on farm prices, (5) greatly increased sale of war bonds, (6) widespread rationing, (7) further curbs on installment buying.

As president, he could order five parts of the program into effect. But before taxes could be raised or ceilings on farm prices lowered, he needed an okay from congress.

While virtually all Americans agreed that his message outlining the program was hard-hitting and straight from the shoulder, complaints over details were heard within 10 minutes after it was announced.

Congressmen split into confused blocs. Old quarrels broke out anew on what to do about:

Ceilings on Farm Prices.

Farm bloc congressmen exploded when they heard FDR propose that ceilings be lowered to parity from 110% of parity. (Parity is a figure calculated to give farmers equal purchasing power with others.) They were already peeved because the department of agriculture had been acting to prevent certain prices from rising to 110% parity by unloading surplus stores on the market.

Grumped Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith (D., S. C.): "They are trying to shove us into socialistic communism but I'm not going."

Control of Wages.

FDR's program would leave the "stabilization or adjustment" of wages to the war labor board. He offered the opinion that "wages in general can and should be kept at existing scales."

Some observers thought this meant FDR wanted wages "frozen" at their present levels. But many congressmen who have clamored for removal of labor's right to time-and-a-half for all work over 40 hours thought FDR was too easy on labor.

Senator Byrd complained that this was practically no program at all. He and others prepared to go ahead and put through the Connally bill authorizing the government to seize strike-bound war plants. They had ready amendments that would established a 48-hour week at regular pay in war industries, freeze open and closed shops. It lost in committee by a single vote.

Increasing Taxes.

In his message FDR opined that profits "must be taxed to the utmost limit consistent with continued production." Specifically, he asked that no citizen be permitted to have more than $25,000 income a year after he had paid his taxes. This would affect about 25,000 Americans, including FDR.

But Senator Taft (R., O.) scowled. Said he. "I object strongly to the principle of a flat limit on all individual incomes."

And Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the house ways and means committee disclosed with irony that he had not found "any feverish demand' 'among committeemen for a limit of $25,000.

Fixing of Prices.

Most Americans approved heartily the idea of fixing ceilings over prices—the more the better. But when the order was issued by Price Administrator Henderson there were some laments.

An absolute ceiling was placed on millions of retail prices. The prices could not exceed the highest levels which each individual seller charged during March. This meant retail prices would have to be decreased about 3%. Businesses failing to comply might find their licenses revoked.

Likewise, landlords in most of 302 war-swollen areas were ordered to reduce their rents to the level of March 1.

The loudest howls came from store owners. They objected to the fact that retail and wholesale prices were frozen to the same month. They contended that their prices in March were not based on March wholesale prices but on lower wholesale prices of several months earlier.

FDR's Admonition.

To Americans who were worrying about the way the administration's program would effect them personally, President Roosevelt offered this searing thought:

"Ask the workers of France and Norway, whipped to labor by the lash, whether the stabilization of wages is too great a 'sacrifice.'

"Ask the women and children whom Hitler is starving whether the rationing of tires and gasoline and sugar is too great a 'sacrifice.'"

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—I do not know any more than you whether vaudeville has staged an honest-to-goodness come-back, but if I had to bet on it I'd say no. One swallow does not make a summer and one big vaudeville extravaganza that is a hit on Broadway in no way establishes the return of a phase of entertainment that died years ago. People will always crowd a theater—any theater—to see a cast of headliners go through their paces, but when you talk of vaudeville, as a part of show business, returning to its former eminence, you are saying that thousands of skits and acts are successfully swinging the show circuits of America, as they did in the days before the depression.

I don't think that the success of one or two shows on Broadway has any significance. There is a tendency hereabouts to brand anything of which New York approves as of national character. This is a mistake. You can build a show around Victor Moore, Paul Draper, the Hartmans, and a dozen other first flight stars and make a showing with them anywhere at any time, but you can not institute a system and have it hold up in communities, great or small, in all sections of the country.

THAT'S what vaudeville was in its prime. It was a phase of American life, just as Fords, drug stores and G-men. People wanted that type of entertainment—the acrobats, the adagio dancers, the baggy-pants comics, the stooges, traveling salesmen and farmers' daughters translated into terms of five minute skits on movie theater stages. They don't any more. They haven't . . . that is . . . Not enough of them have for a long, long time . . . and I don't think they do now.

I have read some dozen or twenty articles and statements in recent days on the wonderful revival of vaudeville. . . . Unfortunately, this is misleading. . . . What happened was that a couple of showmen collected some really able artists, whose names have been kept brightly alive because of their stage, radio, nightclub, and film work, and cast them in an extravagant vaudeville show on Broadway. That is all. It isn't "Vaudeville" that's a success. It's Victor Moore . . . It's Paul Draper. . . . It's the Hartmans. . . . They've always been successes. You put unknown players in those same roles, charge the same prices, and see how far you would get. I don't think you could pay the freight. I may be wrong.

WHENEVER you see a mimic in a nightclub go through his act, you are seeing vaudeville. . . Whenever you hear a torch singer moan out a low down blues lament, you are seeing vaudeville. . . . Whenever you see a comic break gags over the head of a stooge, you are seeing vaudeville, and it doesn't matter whether they are on a parking lot at high noon, in a saloon, or on a theater stage. . . . Vaudeville is a daizy chain of individual acts strung together on a loud and breezy score of tunes. . . . All America still likes twenty minutes of this sort of fun, but all America doesn't want two hours of it consecutively, and until all America does want two hours of unrelieved gags, moans, animal antics, and trick dances I think it is stretching it a little to say without qualification that vaudeville is back.

Second Front

In Britain, Russia and the U. S. had agreed on whether the allies would open up a second front against Germany, it wasn't apparent as April ended.

Russian spokesmen have called insistently upon the allies to arrange such a move. Last week-end they heard a booming Amen from New York where the lively, outspoken Lord Beaverbrook was talking. "The Beaver" urged his own British countrymen to "strike out violently . . . even recklessly" against Germany to aid Russia.

Only a few weeks ago he was in Britain's war cabinet and was, in fact, the No. 2 man in British politics.

But he was squeezed out of the cabinet when Sir Stafford Cripps rose to power. He then came to America as lease-lend coordinator.

In London the conservative and influential Sunday Times deplored his talk as "an unfortunate speech."

There were signs that subjugated Europeans were waiting only for a signal to start uprisings.

Reports reached allied capitals that the Commandos, in their recent raids on St. Nazaire and Boulogne, France, were helped considerably by French natives.

Meanwhile, for several nights in a row, the RAF's bombers hammered at the Baltic port of Rostock, where the Nazis build their famed Heinkel warplanes and where they gather supplies for shipment to the Russian front. The red glow of burning Rostock was seen 250 miles away, travelers reported.

In Washington President Roosevelt disclosed that U. S. Flying Fortresses soon would be joining in the raids, and that "several hundred thousand" Yanks are abroad.

At Home

Army specifications for several types of planes call for use of a trick screw patented and produced by the Dzus Fastener company, a small firm outside New York. It is used to fasten removable parts such as the cowling over the nose of a plane, and eliminates the more cumbersome use of regular screws and bolts.

The demand became so great that Dzus could not turn the screws out fast enough, but Dzus exercised its right and refused to license the patent to other firms. As a result, justice department officials say, 80 planes at one plant were delayed at another and at still another the entire assembly line was shut down.

It was such incidents as these that impelled three senators (O'Mahoney, Bone and LaFollette) to propose a new bill providing permanent "reform" of patent laws. Among other things the bill would compel license of patents that were unused for three years without reasonable cause, or if the patentee refused to issue licenses for a reasonable fee.

America Shedding Gloves?

When Fascist-fawning Pierre Laval re-entered the French cabinet as premier he received a slap resounding enough to be heard throughout France: the United States recalled Ambassador Leahy for "consultations."

Last week-end a still more vigorous slap was heard: the U. S. landed troops in New Caledonia, 800 miles east of Australia, to help the Free French defend that strategic island which flanks America's supply route to Australia.

In a Dither

Leader of the Nation . . . Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces . . . Chief of Government . . . Supreme Holder of Executive Power . . . Supreme Lord of Justice . . . Leader of The National Socialist Party.

Those are some of the more imposing of Adolf Hitler's titles. A tyrant could hardly ask for more, one would think.

But last Sunday a strangely nervous Hitler reached out and asked the hastily-assembled automatons who pose as German lawmakers to pass a law giving him the right, without regard to existing laws, to compel anyone—officer, soldier, official, judge—to do his duty. The Reichstag, without a murmer but with many a blink, complied.

Hitler's anger appeared to be directed particularly at some German judges who had been getting too independent for his taste.

What did it mean Was it a sly Hitlerian move of feigning weakness while preparing to uncork some mighty military blow? British newspapers preferred to believe it showed something rotton inside Germany.

Other parts of Hitler's speech were equally interesting.

He returned to his old alibi that the Russian winter which he had to put up with was much worse than Napoleon's. Specifically he complained that his coldest day was 27 degrees centigrade colder than Napoleon's coldest day.

He confessed that his usually minutely-prepared army was caught completely by the Russian winter and that arrangement had not been made for the enormous task of supplying a German army inside Russia during such winter.

From this he went on to the even more revealing statement that "in the coming winter . . . German railways will be able to meet their tasks better than in the last. . . . The army in the east will be better equipped."

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, May 3.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds augury of strange, unique, perplexing and bewildering experiences or adventures of an unpredictable nature, owing to the powerful conjunction of major planets. Events of universal importance may be expected, but in ordinary channels there may be success, happiness, perhaps romance and thrills, providing a tendency to excess and extravagance be regulated.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of strange, sudden, dramatic and unpredictable adventures and experiences, with exceptional success and happiness if a unique planetary combination be cleverly manipulated. The young are particularly involved and encouraged to full creative expression and achievement.

A child born on this day should be endowed with great versatility, ingenuity, originality, independence, as well as high ambitions and ideals, possibly of universal worth.

For Monday, May 4.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a day of conflicting and challenging situations, with much promise of success, accomplishment, happiness and good fortune, provided an indomitable urge to extravagant indulgence, reckless, impetuous and unruly conduct be held in firm leash. A set of unusual, abnormal or peculiar circumstances may aggravate these proclivities.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may not be surprised at a year of contradictions and surprising adventures, with much of good fortune and success attended by risk, disturbance, dangers, and duplicity.

A child born on this day while having strong temptations in the way of hospitality, generosity, extravagance and prodigality, especially through its questionable friendships, should have much success in unique or uncommon vocations.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

When I finally came back from my memory excursion into a long dead past, which had occupied but a short space of actual time, I was frightened by the question which faced me for immediate settlement.

What should I do with this carved ivory watch charm which I had found hidden in the secret floor compartment of Professor Diswell's mountain home?

Indubitably it was the property of Jack Bickett. Except his wife, I was the nearest of kin. Unless he had sent it to the old professor for safekeeping, I had the right to safeguard it for Katherine, if Jack never should come to claim it, or at least until then.

How then could I find out whether he had sent the charm to Professor Diswell? I naturally shrank from telling the crochety old savant that I had been copying Katie's act of "snooping" into his carefully planned secret hiding places, but unless I did that I could neither produce the ring nor ask him anything about it.

Recalls Charles' Story.

Then I turned another facet of the problem toward my mental camera. Suppose Professor Diswell did not know of the presence of the ring in the compartment beneath the floor? That left only another person in question, the man whom the old professor called Charles, the man whose odd appearance and, to me, doubtful story had so intrigued my imaginative fears.

Charles knew of the hidden compartment. He had turned everybody out of the room because, he said, he had to get something for Professor Diswell, who did not wish anybody else to know where it was hidden.

I went back carefuly over the things Charles had told me about Jack Bickett. He had said that he knew Jack, not intimately but in comradely fashion, as wilderness workers together.

They had left their headquarters together, he had said, and had traveled in company as far as Rio De Janeiro; were to travel to America by different ships, and Charles had said he expected Jack to get in touch with him in the United States, but since then he had heard nothing of Jack.

Sinister Possibilities.

Incongruities in other things Charles had said now loomed before me with possibilities that might be sinister. He had professed only a slight knowledge of Jack's hobby—a puerile word for by brother-cousin's interest in cuneiform writing—saying that he knew only the "A. B. C.'s of the thing." Yet I had sensed a tremendous tension in him as he took the page of cuneiform writing from Professor Diswell's hands, and ran over it with an avid swiftness which gave me the impression that he understood the meaning of every mark on the paper.

When he handed it back he said that Jack had guarded every bit of his cryptogram writing "as if his life depended upon their safety," and that in his opinion the mysterious appearance of this sheet in "Jack's fist might well mean—"

He had not finished that sentence, interrupted by revolver shots from the Diswell house. But I knew that if he had finished it he would have said "might well mean that Jack would be killed."

Another queer angle, I decided, was the absolute dependence the old professor seemed to have upon Charles. The younger man, posing as a servant, his status as accepted by the countryside, almost repulsively unkempt in appearance yet with the manners and speech of a man "to the manor born," appeared to make all decisions for Professor Diswell.

Had Charles Killed Jack?

A final theory based upon these facts caromed around in my brain. Was Charles a criminal? Had he killed Jack and then, armed with knowledge of Jack's affairs and possessing his cuneiform writing, had he wormed his way into old Professor Diswell's confidence, so that he might get the old man to interpret what he could not read himself?

That theory would explain his possession of Jack's watch charm, although it did not explain why he had hidden it in Professor Diswell's secret floor compartment, then left it there when he had removed everything else.

But it was a theory I was queerly and intuitively reluctant to accept, and corroboration of my tacit rejection of it was to come from an unexpected source. For as this caroming conjecture finally came to rest against a dead wall the telephone sounded, and when I answered it the voice of Sadie, the efficient long-distance telephone operator, came to my ears.

"I have the information about those calls now," she said.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

She looked up quickly. "Your sweetheart?"

"I was a small boy. She lived on the place—in the overseer's house."

"What became of her?"

A look, like a sudden shadow, crossed his face. Elise had seen the expression before.

"She went away. The family left."

"Oh. You never saw her again?"

"It was long ago." The shadow lay on his face again, and Elise said no more. They climbed a barbed-wire fence, and Elise tore her skirt. He had helped her over the fence, and still held her hand. They walked on through the tall dry grass of an open field.

* * *

That winter Parris set about organizing his notes and his published articles into a book. The work proved more difficult than he had expected, and as a consequence he saw very little of Randy and Drake or of the Sandors. He planned to go to Vienna in May for final consultation with the board of editors. It was to be a hurried trip.

One evening Randy called him rather late.

"I want to see you, Parris. Could you come down?"

Randy met him at the corner. "Drake's sick, Parris."

"What's wrong?"

"He's in a great deal of pain. In his hip. He's been complaining some all winter. But I thought it was fatigue. He stayed propped up too long at a time. That's what Dr. Mitchell thought, too."

"Does Drake—did he tell Drake anything?"

"No. But he left a sedative Drake's easier just now."

Parris found Drake half asleep, but tossing restlessly. He felt extremely depressed when he left the house.

His interview with Dr. McNeill confirmed his fears.

"Of course, Dr. Mitchell, there must be a consultation. But I'm fairly sure."

"It's not—?" Parris choked a little and cleared his throat. Dr. McNeill sensed the question.

"An operation would be useless."

"How long?"

Dr. McNeill shrugged doubtfully. "I don't give him more than six months—maybe less."

Parris talked to Randy the same day. He tried to veil the pronouncement, and to hold out hopes from the consultation. Little by little the color and the expression left her face.

"Don't try to shield me, Parris. Let's think about Drake. What will he have to go through with before the end?"

"God knows, Randy. I have thought of that."

"We have to do something. We can't let Drake endure too much. We've all fought together to save Drake's sanity and make him the man he was meant to be in the first place. He must not die feeling that he has lost it. He must die while he's himself."

Parris said nothing.

"Do you hear me, Parris?"

"Yes, Randy. You pose an old question. There's nothing any of us can do. There's nothing any honorable physician could do."

"Listen, Parris. I've got to know something."

"Well?"

"Could Drake's—could the amputation have had anything to do with this?"

Parris waited a moment. His eyes darkened. "I can't answer that question, Randy."

"Could it have had anything to do with it?"

"Possibly."

"Probably?"

"I can't say. Randy, my dear, you are pretty stouthearted. But I am telling you the truth when I say I don't know. I thought of Dr. Gordon right away — as I always do whenever a case comes up that he has had anything to do with. But I couldn't even in my own mind answer that question. Many people have cancer that attacks bone structure. We don't know causes."

"I've shut away old tormenting questions about this awful amputation, deep in my mind, but now—"

"Don't cry."

"I'm not crying. I'm cursing. I'm cursing everything there is in this town, everything in the world, everything in heaven, or hell! Parris, I could stand anything for myself — but, Drake! My God, hasn't he had enough?"

"I wish I knew one word to say, Randy. I'm here—to do anything I can for you and Drake—"

"The time will come when you'll have to do something for him. The time will be here soon enough!"

Dr. McNeill assured Parris that there was no immediate danger, that the cancer was working slowly and he had left instructions with the nurses to see that Drake suffered little. Both knew the time would come when opiates would fail.

So Parris left to keep his appointment in Vienna, and exactly a month later he stepped off the grimy little Kings Row local. The reports from Dr. McNeill had been disquieting.

It seemed to Parris that the days and weeks and months after his return stood still. Hour by hour, almost minute by minute, Dr. McNeill, Parris, Randy, and the nurse fought back the horror of pain.

Consciousness was not allowed to come to Drake very often. He moaned and called, and while it was nerve-wracking to hear, he actually did not know much that was happening.

Toward the end of August it seemed that Drake could not possibly last from one day to another. Randy came again and again to Parris.

"Parris, Parris, for God's sake! You love Drake. You're his friend! How can you let this go on any longer?"

One morning it seemed to Parris that Drake's mind emerged a little. Increased doses of morphia at lessening intervals were no longer able to hold back the legions of torture.

Drake looked with a kind of dazed wonder at Parris, and then at Dr. McNeill. Then he turned his head slowly toward Parris. The cloudy look in his eyes cleared for a few seconds, but in those few seconds something passed between the two men. Dr. McNeill was aware of the communication. He stood looking curiously at Parris.

"It's a matter of hours, Dr. Mitchell," he said evenly.

Drake twisted his head to one side, and clenched his teeth over his lips. A line of blood ran down his chin. Then the fog of an unutterable agony blurred his eyes again, and a long hoarse howl broke from his throat.

Parris sat, white and still.

"It's for you to say, Dr. Mitchell." He had made the same decision once before. Anna . . . his grandmother . . .

He bent his head a moment. Then he looked up at Dr. McNeill.

"Do you think a normal injection, at shorter intervals—"

Dr. McNeill turned without a word and prepared a hypodermic syringe at the little table. The nurse came in.

"You'd better snatch a little rest before the afternoon, Miss Cooper. I'll call you."

The sound of Dr. McNeill's steps receded. Parris arose and closed the door leading into the hall. Then he sat down on the edge of the bed and took Drake's hand. He laid his fingers on the thready pulse and waited.

He sat motionless. He could hear the tiny ticking sound of the nurse's watch on the table behind him.

The sun crept in at the front windows.

Parris laid Drake's hand on the quiet sheet, and folded the other one over it.

He stood for a moment looking down at the blue-white face on the pillow. A sudden breeze swung the curtains inward, and blew a lock of hair across Drake's brow. It gave him a boyish look.

Parris went out and closed the door softly behind him.

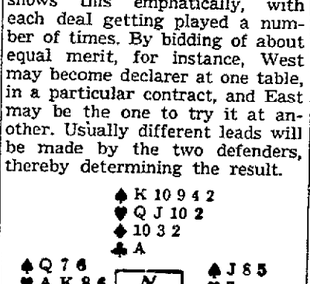
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

NOBODY TO BE BLAMED

There is so much uncertainty coupled with the certainties of bridge, that in many cases nobody should be credited for an accomplishment, and nobody should be blamed for a failure. Duplicate shows this emphatically, with each deal getting played a number of times. By bidding of about equal merit, for instance, West may become declarer at one table, in a particular contract, and East may be the one to try it at another. Usually different leads will be made by the two defenders, thereby determining the result.



(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1. 1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT
2. 1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
3 NT

Among various bidding successions on this deal, the two chronicled are typical to show how East became declarer in some cases, and West in others. Where East was the declarer, the contract was made in every case, but where West was, he was beaten.

Against East, South led the diamond 4 to the A. The club 2 to the Q lost to the A, and the diamond 3 was won by the K. After the club K and J, South won the club 8 with the 10 and led the diamond 5 to the 9. East then scored the club 8, diamond Q and the heart tops, losing two spades at the end. Notice that if the defenders had switched to spades after the opening lead of a diamond, East nevertheless could have made his contract, because South would have had no way to put North back into the lead after the club A was gone.

Where West played the hand, North led the spade 10 to the A, took the repeat with the K, and knocked out the only spade stopper while he still held the club A for a re-entry. After he scored this, he took two more spades, beating the contract.

Of course if, against East, South had decided to lead the unbid suit, spades, following the A with the 3, the contract could have been beaten, but nobody made that lead.

Your Week-End Lesson.

Why is it that a very fine player will sometimes be set two tricks, in rubber bridge, whereas, playing the same contract and the same hand, a player of equal skill is beaten only one trick in a match point duplicate?

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Mansfield Provident Company Celebrates 26th Anniversary

Loan Firm Advises Consolidation of Debts.

Mansfield's oldest personal loan company, the Mansfield Provident company at 18 West Third street, is celebrating this year its 26th anniversary.

One of the things which makes H. E. Amsbaugh, general manager of the company, a bit proud of his company is that the firm's first customer who did business with it 26 years ago made application for another loan recently.

"This is but one instance in which hundreds of customers have shown their appreciation of the service rendered them," says Amsbaugh.

The Mansfield Provident company specializes in personal loans, ranging from $5 to $1,000. Loans are made for consolidating debts, purchasing consumer goods, for medical or funeral expenses and for business reasons.

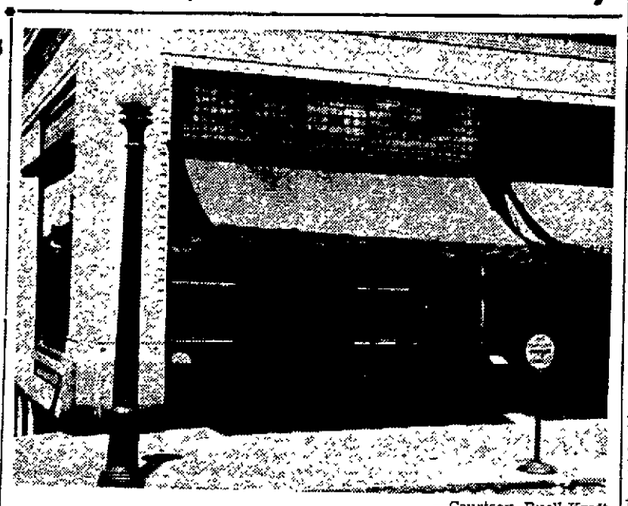
"We take pride in the fact that nearly 40 per cent of the loans made by our company is to help persons consolidate their debts," says Amsbaugh. "In this way, they can group all their debts in one sum and get rid of them easier. Since President Roosevelt has discouraged installment buying, it is even more important than ever that people get out of debt.

"One thing is certain," Amsbaugh continued, "If you can't get out of debt, you most certainly can't purchase defense bonds and stamps and you can't take advantage of good credit which will enable you to purchase articles at savings."

The Mansfield Provident handles most of its business from its home office here in Mansfield but has branch offices at Shelby and Ashland.

Amsbaugh is proud that the company is a local corporation, has local stockholders and Mansfield businessmen serving on its board of directors.

"Because we are local we can give better service than the larger chain companies," says Amsbaugh. "When a question comes up on a loan, we can settle it immediately without referring it to this or that department in this or that city."



—Courtsey Buell-Kraft.

Pictured above is an exterior view of the home office of the Mansfield Provident company, located at 18 West Third street. The loan company, the oldest in Mansfield, is celebrating its 26th anniversary this year. Directed by H. E. Amsbaugh, general manager, the Mansfield Provident makes most of its personal loans to customers wishing to consolidate all their debts at one point.

The loan company like 565 others in Ohio operates under a license from the state department of commerce and is subject to rates and regulations set by the department.

The war hasn't hurt business too bad as yet, according to Amsbaugh, who states that accounts have increased since the beginning of the year.

"Most people feel that loan companies make more money during depressions or in bad years," says Amsbaugh, "but the truth is just to the contrary. No one wants to borrow money when business is bad. Its when things are going well and they wish to make a few additional purchases that the loans increase."

Amsbaugh explained that the Mansfield Provident is a member of the Mansfield Credit Bureau and in addition maintains its own files. Loans can be made in a remarkably short time, according to the general manager.

"A few weeks ago, we made a loan to a customer and completed the transaction before the twelve minutes he had paid for in a parking meter had elapsed," said Amsbaugh. "In other cases, of course, much more time is needed to complete a loan."

Amsbaugh pointed out that 39 per cent of the loans made by his company are made to persons consolidating debts. Other loans are made for the following: purchasing durable consumer goods such as refrigerators, 18 per cent; purchasing non-durable goods such as clothing, 14 per cent; medical or funeral expenses, 11 per cent; for business purposes, 9 per cent; and miscellaneous, 9 per cent.

"After all, there's only one good rule to follow in our business just as in most others," said Amsbaugh "and that is good credit."

Utility Employes Teach First Aid To Help Defense

Scores of Mansfielders are among the 1,800 defense-minded citizens of northern Ohio receiving first aid training in 93 classes conducted by Ohio Public Service company employe volunteer instructors, according to an announcement made today by T. O. Kennedy, company president.

Civilian defense, church, civic, police and women's clubs groups are among those receiving training from O. P. S. employes, Kennedy said. Most of the classes are sponsored by the Red Cross while some are sponsored directly by the company itself.

"Each employe must renew his certificate periodically as part of our general safety program," he said. The company is also conducting review and beginner courses for its own employes at the present time.

"This policy of first aid training and the employes' keen personal interest in first aid have produced dozens of qualified first aiders who are now volunteering their services as lay instructors during this emergency," he said.

According to Kennedy, the practice of O. P. S. employes to volunteer as first aid instructors is not new and for many years the company has been recognized as a leader in safety and first aid in every territory it serves.

Each of its 11 divisions carries on an intensive safety program under a qualified safety supervisor who also helps local industries with their safety problems whenever possible, he said.

In 1941, for the third consecutive year, the company was awarded the National Safety Council trophy for the finest safety and accident record in the country among Class A public utilities. In competition with 21 other leading organizations, it set a national record at the same time by being the first utility ever to be awarded the trophy three times in a row.

Urges Childhood Training In Music

Deems Taylor, eminent music critic, composer and music commentator, has written that "good music is exactly as mysterious and complicated as any other of the arts; and no more so."

"The way to appreciate music," says Taylor, "is to hear it, and the way to understand it is to be familiar with it. If a good many otherwise sophisticated Americans of the last generation—and this one—are musical illiterates, the reason is, not that they have no inherent taste for it, but that they came in contact with it too late. They weren't caught young enough."

The Eugene Smart Music Shop and Studios are anxious to teach youngsters the finer points of good music. They offer a complete line of the best in music on records to give the youngsters a good basic foundation during their childhood days

Undefeated Tygers Take Fourth Straight Track Meet

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Joe Lesch, retiring president of the Mansfield softball commission and veteran manager of sports teams for Yuncker Brothers, is one of those persons who sympathizes with sponsors, managers and softball players in their reluctance to plan for this summer's play on the kittenball diamonds.

"At the rate this city's athletes are leaving town to join the armed forces, a manager wouldn't know from one day to the next whether he had a ball club or not," Joe explains.

Joe is among the group soon to leave for armed service, having passed his examinations for the army air corps, so he views the softball situation more as a fan than an interested participant.

"If I were staying here this summer, I still wouldn't attempt to manage a softball team," he says.

"I don't blame the sponsors, nor the managers, nor the players themselves for not committing themselves to league play. The sponsors naturally want a team that will bring credit to their name, and they can't even be assured that they'll have a team right now. The managers want as little worry as possible, and a continuous hunt for new players to replace those going to war wouldn't decrease their worries for them.

"And the players can't be blamed if they want to play on a team that has teamwork. And they can't have that if their team is continually being broken up. I'm glad," says Joe, "I won't be here for the season. It looks like a dull sports summer at home."

Right now it looks as though an Industrial softball league may be the only one operating here this summer.

Four teams have filed entries, and four more are expected to join up, and so long as men in defense plants are needed in their present posts, an Industrial loop appears to have a chance of playing with some success.

As one Humphryes representative told me, in reporting that his team was starting practice:

* * *

"We may have to use a lot of old men, and we may not even last through the season, and we may have trouble getting equipment, but we're not going to let the season die before it starts." 'At's the old fight!

* * *

Meanwhile the state champion Provident Loan girls aren't worried much about such things as losing players to the armed forces, or running short of equipment, or of tire or gas rationing to handicap them on trips.

"We've already got the equipment," says Manager "Doc" Daugherty, there are at least three cars in the outfit with good tires, and as for the armed forces: we may even visit an army camp this summer.

"I've written to Louisville, trying to arrange a game there and one the next day at Camp Knox."

A trip to Peoria, Ill., also is under consideration by the girls. "Doc" recently had three letters in five days from the management of the Peoria team, attempting to complete arrangements for the trip.

NEW LONDON WINS LOOP TRACK TITLE

NEW LONDON—For the second successive year, the New London Wildcat thinclads annexed the annual North High School league title at Dill field, Oberlin, on Friday. Clearview, the 'Cats nearest rival, trailed 10½ points, while Amherst, Vermilion, and Medina were 30 points away. Wellington, remaining school in the league, did not compete. Final results were New London 51; Clearview 41½; Amherst 20½; Vermilion 20 1-6; Medina 21.

One new record was hung up by the New London team, with Dale Seibert, Wildcat flash, wresting the 440-yard dash away from Clearview.

Frisch Chased By Umps

Pirates End Brooklyn Streak at 6 Games.

By AUSTIN REALMEAR
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NOW that Manager Frankie Frisch of the Pittsburgh Pirates has been chased out of his own park, the major league baseball season can be considered officially under way.

* * *

Frisch, who sometimes resorts to pantomime when umpires aren't impressed with words, was waved to the showers by Larry Goetz in the ninth inning yesterday, but the Pirates went on to beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7-6, and snap a six-game winning streak for the National league champs.

* * *

The score was tied at 5-all when Billy Herman beat out an infield hit and Arky Vaughan sent him home with a double. Goetz called Herman safe on a close play at the plate and Frisch bounded out of the dugout. Other Pittsburgh players hurled towels into the air and Coach Jake Flowers joined the huddle at home plate.

As usual, however, the umpire won, the Dodgers got their run, and Frisch, Lopez and Flowers took early showers.

As the game resumed without the Pirate trio, Brooklyn was retired and Johnny Allen took over the mound, the fourth Dodger hurler of the game. Then the Dodgers proceeded to hand the game right back to the Bucs.

A single and two walks loaded the bases. A wild pitch admitted the tying run, then Allen walked the bases full again on purpose and Vaughan ended the game by letting Vince DiMaggio's grounder go through him.

* * *

The defeat shaved a full game off the Dodgers' lead and enabled the second place Pirates to climb within three lengths of the pace-setters.

* * *

Meanwhile, the Cleveland Indians stretched their winning streak to a dozen games by routing the Washington Senators, 13-6, and increased their first-place margin in the American league to two games and a half.

The Detroit Tigers also staged a 16-hit bombardment in walloping the New York Yankees, 7-2, and hopping over the world champions into the American league's runner-up spot.

Paul (Dizzy) Trout held the New Yorkers to four hits, but went wild in the ninth and had to be rescued by Hal Newhouser.

Ted Williams snapped out of his hitting slump with two singles and a home run, but it didn't help the Boston Red Sox, who went down before the St. Louis Browns, 10-6. John Niggeling toiled the route for the Brownies, although he gave up 11 blows.

The Chicago White Sox ended a seven-game losing streak by bumping the Philadelphia Athletics, 5-2, behind the six-hit hurling of Johnny Rigney.

Five of the afternoon's 15 home runs came at St. Louis, where the Cardinals tripped the Boston Braves, 8-7 in 10 innings, and replaced them in third place in the National league.

Stan Musial hit two of the Cards' four homers. Ken O'Dea came through with the payoff blast, a homer in the last of the tenth.

The Chicago Cubs pulled the New York Giants into a fifth-place tie with them by taking a free-swinging contest, 13-9, and the Cincinnati Reds tightened up in the late innings to save a 6-5 verdict over the Philadelphia Phils.

Colts Tuned For Big Race

Field of 17 May Be Reduced by Post Time.

By ORLO ROBERTSON

LOUISVILLE — (AP)—Seventeen highly-tuned three-year-old horses brought their argument over the distribution of $87,250 to Churchill Downs' stretch today in the 68th edition of the sporting world's most colorful spectacle—the Kentucky Derby.

As thousands of visitors joined the natives in turning this city into a Roman holiday, the trainers of the 15 colts and two geldings pronounced their charges ready for the mile and quarter test of speed and stamina starting at about 5:30 p. m., Central War Time. To the winner will go $65,225 net, a garland of roses and recognition as the No. 1 candidate for three-year-old turf honors of 1942.

* * *

In all probability not more than 15 of the overnight entries will parade to the post. Trainers have until 45 minutes before post time to scratch, in which case the size of the purse to the winner will be reduced $500 for each horse withdrawn.

Ellwood B. Johnston of Los Angeles was doubtful whether he would start First Prize, one of the geldings, while Trainer Ray Waldron said he would scratch Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Dogpatch if it came up mud.

There also was a remote possibility that Trainer Ben Jones would decide that Warren Wright's Sun Again was not quite ready for the gruelling run. The master of Calumet Farm, however, would like nothing better than to bid for his second straight Derby victory, having won with Whirlaway last year.

Meanwhile, high in his sanctum overlooking the vast Downs, Col. Matt Winn predicted that his dream would finally come true and there would be a crowd of 100,000.

As late as 24 hours ago there were indications the crowd would not measure up to that of recent years, but overnight the people came—by train, airplane, cars, buses and even Ohio river steamboats.

* * *

Col. Winn, in predicting a crowd that would hit six figures, said he based his opinion on yesterday's attendance—the largest pre-Derby turnout in many a year. The mutuel handle was upwards of $600,000, indicating also the endangering of the Derby wager record of $2,096,613 established in 1926 when Bubbling Over won for E. R. Bradley.

There is little indication off past performances just how far and how fast any of the field can go. As a result the experts have been up in the air for weeks. Al Sabath's Alsab won ten straight races last year and headed into his three-year-old campaign, apparently unbeatable.

But the little Chicago-owned colt has yet to have his nose in front in 1942, with the result he was no better than 4 to 1 in the early betting. In his stead at the top of the books was the one-two punch of Devil Diver and Shut Out from Mrs. Payne Whitney's stables and the Texan, Requested.

Requested was held at 3 to 1.

Mrs. Whitney's pair was quoted at 7 to 2 largely because of Devil Diver and Eddie Arcaro, hailed as the smartest jockey in the business. The little Italian, who won with Lawrin in 1938 and Whirlaway last year, had his choice of the two horses and selected the Diver after the colt had turned in the prize mile and quarter workout of the week.

* * *

Also highly considered at 5 to 1 was the Irish-bred Hollywood from Emerson Woodward's Valdina Farm at Uvalde, Tex.

* * *

Sun Again, although not considered by Ben Jones to be at his peak, was quoted at 6 to 1 off his Derby trial race, Tuesday, when he lost by a nose to Valdina Orphan.

Odds on the others stretched all the way to 25 to 1.

Bucks, Wolves Both Beaten

Fall From Undefeated Ranks in Big Ten.

CHICAGO —(AP)— Ohio State and Michigan dropped from the undefeated ranks in the Big Ten baseball chase yesterday while Iowa forged into undisputed leadership.

Bob Faber, big Iowa righthander, allowed Chicago one hit as the Hawkeyes won, 1-0, their sixth conference triumph in seven starts.

Wisconson opened its season with a 6-3 verdict over Illinois on Ed Scheiwe's five-hitter.

Harry McFerren dashed home on an infield out in the last half of the ninth to give Purdue a 6-5 count over Ohio State. The Bucks shelled sophomore Paul Petrick in the last inning for four runs to knot the score but Walter Liefheit quelled the outburst.

Guy Wellman's steal home and Bob White's circuit blow were instrumental in cracking Michigan's spirit and giving Indiana a 6-4 victory.

The Northwestern at Minnesota game was postponed and a double header is scheduled today.

Beat Columbus North 78 to 43 at Stadium

Show Improvement In Six Events, Lightnin' Jones Scores 16 Points

MANSFIELD HIGH SCHOOL'S undefeated track team chalked up its fourth straight victory last evening, romping over Columbus North 78 to 43 in a twilight meet at Stadium field before 300 fans.

After the first two events, which saw the score tied at 9-9, the Tygers pulled steadily away to a commanding lead, and there was never a doubt as to the ultimate winner.

* * *

The Tygers came through with some very good marks on the fast track, showing improvement in no less than six events.

* * *

Pore ran the mile in 4:47.8, taking the lead before the first turn and setting his own pace for the long jaunt.

The relay teams continued their undefeated record, taking both the 880 and mile events in handy fashion, and wheeling the 880 in their best time of the year, 1:34.8.

Lightnin' Jones again contributed three first places to the Tyger score, winning the 220 in 23 seconds flat, the shot put with a heave of 46 feet, 4 inches, and the broad jump with a leap of 20 feet, 4¾ inches. And he anchored the mile relay team to make his point total 16 for the day.

* * *

Jones, Dietzel and Winbigler swept all three places in the shot put.

Packer took the high jump with a leap of five feet, 7¼ inches, his best mark of the season.

Mansfield tracksters will meet Bucyrus in the feature division of the all-school track meet to be held Wednesday at 7 o'clock at Stadium field.

120-yard High Hurdles: Won by Martin (N); second, Lewis (M); third, Owen (N). Time: 15.6.

100-yard Dash: Won by Witchey (M); second Woodruff (N); third, Hamman (M). Time: 10.7.

Mile Run: Won by Pore (M); second, Elson (N); third, Timmons (M). Time: 4:47.8.

880-yard Relay: Won by Mansfield (Woodberry, Herrick, Burrage, Menke). Time: 1:34.8.

440-yard Run: Won by Enyeart (N); second, Woodbury (M); third, Herrick (M). Time: 53.6.

ABC BOWLING CLASSIC SEES SURE PROFIT

COLUMBUS —(AP)— The local committee sponsoring the American bowling congress tournament here breathed easily today and hoped the final 12 days would bring good crowds.

In contrast with the tourney's 1933 visit to Columbus, when the local committee finished in the red, the 1942 meet pushed over the hump last night and from now on it's all profit.

Indians Try For Record

13 Straight Wins Would Set Cleveland Mark.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The nonstop Indians sought a Cleveland record of 13 consecutive victories today in their last game of a two-contest series here with the Washington Senators.

* * *

Manager Boudreau was undecided whether to start Lefty Al Smith or Right Hander Jim Bagby. But victory would taste extra sweet, because it would extend the Tribe's lead over the Detroit Tigers or the New York Yankees, battling for second place.

The Washington Senators, aided and abetted by the strong right arm of Louis Bo-Bo Newsom, aimed to repeat last year's performance which snapped an Indian winning streak of 11 games. Newsom, who has spoiled many a Redskin party, was Manager Bucky Harris' choice to take the smart from a 13 to 6 pasting dished out by the Indians yesterday.

The Indians celebrated May day by hammering four Senator pitchers for 16 hits, totaling 31 bases. Half of their hits were for extra bases, including Les Fleming's second home run, triples by Oris Hockett, Jeff Heath, Boudreau and Buster Mills, and doubles by Fleming, Boudreau, Ray Mack and Ken Keltner.

* * *

Cashing in on two big rallies, the Redskins scored four runs in the first inning and five more in the fourth. It was the biggest display of Cleveland batting power this season.

* * *

On the defensive side, Mel Harder pitched his second victory and complete game, which doubled his 1941 number of full-route performances. He was hit hard in the first two frames, possibly because it took the Nats 20 minutes to get the Indians out in the first inning, and Harder cooled off from his pre-game warmup.

Wright Shows Form Return

Starts Hitting in 1940 Style For Millers.

(By Associated Press)

Big Ab Wright, who batted a weak .284 last season after knocking the hide off the ball in 1940, appears to be returning to form much to the gratification of Minneapolis, struggling along in the depths of the American Association.

The right fielder swatted three out of four yesterday—a double, triple and homer—as the Millers stretched a victory string to three by defeating Indianapolis, 5-3. They jumped into sixth place and Columbus, pre-season choice for the pennant, now is collecting cobwebs in the basement.

The Redbirds fell victim to Kansas City, 10-5, in a night affair with pinch hitter Jack Saltzgaver breaking up the game. He doubled in the seventh with bases filled.

Milwaukee bunched eight tallies in the seventh to whip Toledo for the third straight time, 9-7, and remain on the Association roost. The Brewers have played two games more than the Blues.

Art Herring, the nemesis of Louisville, held the Colonels to five hits as St. Paul won 5-0. He was buoyed by homers from Gil English and Phil Weintraub. The game was called in the sixth.

Judges Named For Auto Race

Qualifiers Booked at Noon, Races at 2:45.

Sunday afternoon promptly at 2:45 what may be the last auto races and motor thrill events to be seen in these parts before the end of the war will get under way at the Fairgrounds.

Thirty-one cars are entered and as there are usually ten or more post-time entries, Promoter Beam predicts a list of forty cars for the midget races.

This will necessitate qualfying trials which will start at noon. These promise to be interesting, as the 20 fastest cars in the entry of forty will be allowed to face the starter, so that only the select cars will be at the post when the first race starts.

Officials are Charles Swank, presiding judge; Earl Williamson, clerk of course; and Pat Monahan, starter.

here will be eight midget events on the program and twelve automobile thrillers. Lucky Willard Lott will attempt to jump an automobile over a trans-continental bus and land in four other cars parked in front of the bus. Earl Hapgood will crash a car at sixty miles an hour into a solid brick wall, while Steve Horner will do the sensational Dive Bomber crash. Al Simms will roll a car end-over-end. In all there will be twenty events on the afternoon program. Gates will open at 11 o'clock.

"Woods and Waters"

By YUNCKER BROS.

Probably the oldest type of vessel in the world is the gufa, used on the Tigris River, Iraq. It is a circular boat, not unlike a huge dish.

According to a National Outboard Association, the most common reason why outboard fishing motors go to the repair shop, is sand in the gas tank. It is recommended that care be exercised in filling the tank, to keep out dirt and grit. A fine-mesh strainer in the funnel being good insurance against this kind of trouble.

A big sword fish has great power, its sword amazing strength. Nova Scotia records tell of a whaler returning to port with the broken sword of one of these fishes imbedded in its timbers. The sword had gone through copper sheathing, a 1 inch board, a 3 inch hardwood plank, a solid oak timber, and another board 2 inches thick, finally coming to a stop in the head of an oil cask.

MANY LEADERS CONTINUE ON UPWARD TRAIL

Plenty of Minor Declines Also Are Found on Board In Short Session.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Many stock market leaders extended the recovery swing by fractions in today's brief session but minor declines were plentiful.

On the upside were American Telephone, Chrysler, Du Pont, N. Y. Central, Western Union and North American Aviation. Declines were posted for Bethlehem, Anaconda, Radio Corp., and Pennsylvania.

Boardrooms blamed the high cost of war change-overs and cessation of normal automobile production for the sharp drop in Chrysler's first quarter net. Directors voted a dividend of $1 on the common, the same as paid in the preceding quarter but a 50-cent cut from quarterly disbursements in 1941. The concern reported profits equal to $1.13 a share in the initial three months against $2.20 in the like period last year.

Interest was shown in the survey of the rubber manufacturers' association disclosing shipments of pneumatic automobile casings in March were off 8 per cent from February and 81.4 per cent below the aggregate in March a year ago. Output decreased 3.9 per cent from February and 79.7 from March, 1941.

17 KILLED IN AIR TRANSPORT

Bodies Recovered Following Crash of Plane Near Salt Lake City.

of the women, and the plane's stewardess.

The crash was the first major domestic airlines disaster since fifteen army officers, film star Carole Lombard, her mother and her publicity agent and three crew members were killed near Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 16.

Local officials of the civil aeronautics board opened an immediate investigation. Four other crack investigators were ordered to the scene upon orders from CAA headquarters in Washington.

Salt Lake City airport attendants heard the plane overhead and were preparing for its landing when suddenly they heard a terrific crash, audible for ten miles around. Then, the plane's gasoline tanks exploded, creating a gigantic flash.

"Trip No. 4 has crashed!" said an observer in the airport's control tower

Salt Lake City police were immediately notified and they set out for the flaming wreckage, leading a speeding caravan composed of crash crews and every available ambulance in the city.

A United Airlines spokesman reported that flying conditions were favorable and that visibility had been nine miles at the time of the crash.

Airport officials believed that motor failure probably was the cause of the accident

They based their belief on a report from Gearhart, who watched the plane on its final few seconds in the air. Gearhart, owner of the Log Cabin Inn on U. S. highway 91, about five miles north of Salt Lake City, ran to the wreck scene. But leaving his inn, he had an aide telephone the airport. Gearhart's companion said:

"We just saw a plane flying low over the inn—we've just heard a crash—"

Every available hand at the airport then rushed to the roof-top and saw the flames on Ensign peak.

The airport officials theorized, on the basis of the known weather conditions and the innkeeper's report, that the pilot saw the ground, but was unable to avoid crashing into it because of motor trouble

The crash took place as the plane was coming into Salt Lake City airport for a landing. It was to have landed at Denver, en route east, after stopping briefly at the Utah capital.

The passenger ship was en route to Chicago and New York, and had reported "everything OK" at 10:56 p. m., when it circled as though for a landing at the lake airport. It crashed a few minutes later.

MANDALAY IN HANDS OF JAPS, REPORT CLAIMS

U. S. Forces Gird For Attack on Australia as Enemy Masses Ships, Men.

ing with great forces when Lashio is in enemy hands," he said.

From New Delhi, a Burma communique said that on the Mandalay front all British troops were being withdrawn from positions north of the Irrawaddy river and that bridges across the Myitnge river had been blown up.

The Japanese also were at Hsenwi, on the Burma road 32 miles northeast of Lashio and within 50 miles of the China border.

On the western Burma front the British still were falling back in the Monywa area, slightly northwest of Mandalay.

The main Allied goal now seemed to be to rescue as great a part of their forces as possible from threatened entrapment.

Dispatches from Australia and a special communique issued at MacArthur's headquarters made it clear that officials believe the Japanese are massing men, warships and airplanes north and northeast of Australia for a big drive against that continent, the communications lines to America or perhaps New Zealand.

The most significant development was a special communique saying that two airplanes, obviously Japanese reconnaissance craft, had flown over Townsville, on the desolate northeast Australian coast, and had escaped Allied anti-aircraft fire and interceptor planes.

The emphasis put on the two planes left no doubt that MacArthur believed they were a prelude to a possible enemy stab at the Australian coast, especially in view of Washington reports that Japanese warships were concentrated in the islands to the north from where they might strike at the vital supply line from the United States.

American troops are on the French island of Caledonia, athwart the supply lines, but the Japanese have a foothold in the Solomon islands and the tone of dispatches from the southwest Pacific today put particular emphasis on the enemy's strength both in the air and on the sea.

Apparently reflecting official comment, American correspondents warned that the Japanese spearheads north of Australia had only been dulled rather than broken or blunted as a result of steady Allied air bombing of at least eight bases. The American pilots were credited with striking highly effective blows and with shooting down or destroying enemy planes at the rate of almost one an hour for a total of 62 in a 72-hour period.

But it was stated that the American and Allied air squadrons do not claim to hold air superiority over the island which Japan seized as invasion bases and that more war supplies are urgently needed on the Australian front if a big-scale invasion thrust is to be repulsed.

Greatest interest centered on Japanese naval concentrations and it was suggested that the two planes that flew over Townsville might have come from an aircraft carrier since that Australian town is some 1,000 miles from any enemy base.

In the waters southeast of Japan, an Allied submarine was reported by the German radio to have sunk a Japanese ship and a "Russian" ship, indicating that the American naval forces still were striking back at the enemy's front door.

In the Philippines, enemy air forces intensified their bombardment of the fortress of Corregidor in Manila bay in an apparent attempt to bring about a quick decision there but without any indication of a marked change in the situation.

On Mindanao island, Japanese forces were trying to cut off the American-Filipino defenders by a push from Cotabato to Davao on the southern tip of the island.

India Congress Votes Against Fight

ALLAHABAD, India—(INS)—By the overwhelming margin of 176 to four, the all-India congress party's working committee today passed a resolution declaring that resistance to any invasion of India "can only take the form of non-violent non-co-operation."

The resolution also said no compromise with Britain was possible and warned:

"Britain must abandon its hold on India."

The vote was regarded as a complete victory for Mohandas K. Gandhi, spiritual leader of India's Hindu millions, and his "non-violence" policy.

By a margin of 120 to 15, the committee rejected a resolution introduced by C. R. Rajagoopalachari, former premier of Madras, which would have recognized the claim of the All-India Moslem league for independence. Rajagopalachari resigned from the committee Thursday, anticipating defeat for his effort.

THEATERS

Family Drama.

Judge Hardy enlists the aid of his son, Andy, in his efforts to smooth out the path of a young girl whose parents bring their squabbles into his court in "The Courtship of Andy Hardy," showing at the Ohio. Lewis Stone is again seen as Judge Hardy and Mickey Rooney appears in his usual role of Andy. The girl, a newcomer to the screen, is Donna Reed who blossoms from a wallflower in a belle in the role of the neglected daughter. Cecilia Parker, Ann Rutherford and Sara Haden are others in the cast.

Action Picture.

Pat O'Brien and Brian Donlevy wage a free-for-all in "Two Yanks in Trinidad," the Madison attraction that has its action in one of America's danger-stalked outposts. The two stars play New York mobsters who have their own reasons for joining the army. Once in it they find a bigger war is being waged than the one they had personally conducted. Janet Blair, Roger Clark and John Emery are in the cast. Marlene Dietrich has the role of a Broadway actress with screwball ideas in the second picture, "The Lady Is Willing." Fred MacMurray is the leading man and Aline MacMahon is featured.

Film Musical.

"Birth of the Blues," opening Sunday at the Ritz, goes back to the early 1900's when a band of white musicians started giving a new twist to the music invented by the Negroes on the levee. Bing Crosby has the leading role of a music-maker who wants to organize the hottest band in the southland. His efforts meet with apathy on the part of the public until the music is too unusual to go unrecognized. "Memphis Blues," and some of the other great blues songs of the day are introduced in the picture that has Mary Martin, Jack Teagarden and Brian Donlevy in the cast.

Theatrical Background.

Domestic life behind the footlights is depicted in "Bedtime Story," the Loretta Young-Fredric March co-starring picture at the Park. Miss Young appears as a Broadway actress who seeks the divorce courts when her playwright-husband refuses to settle down because of his never-failing inspiration to write a new play. Fredric March plays the husband who finally stages his wife's second honeymoon and the cast includes Robert Benchley and Eve Arden. "Girl From Alaska," thrilling drama of the north, is the second attraction with Ray Middleton and Jean Parker in the leads.

Robinson Starred.

Edward G. Robinson is featured in "Unholy Partners," with Loraine Day at the Majestic today and Sunday. Tex Ritter's "Bullets For Bayonets," is the second attraction.

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY

WAL, I WARNED YOU - STILL WATERS RUN DEEP! JUST 'CAUSE A MAN ISN'T IN POLITICS DOESN'T PROVE HE'S A FOOL - SOMETIMES IT'S THE OTHER WAY 'ROUND
NO USE RUBBIN' IT IN, MR MAYOR
4-27
OLD ORPHAN OLIVER NEVER TOLD ANYONE HE WAS A DOCTOR - WHEN ONE OF MY BOYS HAD OLIVER ARRESTED FOR PRACTICING MEDICINE WITHOUT A LICENSE, I TOLD HIM TO GO AHEAD
AN' WHEN OLIVER WENT TO COURT AN' SHOWED THE JUDGE HIS DOCTOR'S LICENSE - IT STARTED ALL THE COUNTY LAUGHING - AN' THEY WEREN'T LAUGHING AT OLIVER!
SURE - HE WON THE FIRST ROUND - BUT THE FIGHT'S NOT OVER YET
OH, I'M LAUGHING BECAUSE I'M SO DUMB! I KNOW COLD WEATHER COMES FROM THE NORTH - AN' HOT WEATHER FROM THE SOUTH - BUT I CAN'T FIGURE OUT WHERE ALL THE NICE WEATHER COMES FROM! HA HA HA
DARRELL McCLURE
WEEDS MAKE ME SICK! THE FASTER YOU PULL THEM UP, THE FASTER THEY GROW!
AND THE SNEAKY WAY WEEDS GROW - ALWAYS HIDING BEHIND THE VEGETABLES, WHERE YOU CAN'T SEE 'EM!
4-28
I DON'T LIKE WEEDS - BUT THEY'RE NOT AS BAD AS THE UGLY LITTLE BUGS - SOME WEEDS LOOK PRETTY - BUT BUGS - FAUGH!
YES, I GUESS BUGS ARE WORSE THAN WEEDS
I DON'T SEE WHY THERE HAS TO BE ANY BUGS OR WEEDS AT ALL
DARRELL McCLURE
MR. OLIVER SEZ SOMEDAY FOLKS WILL BE SMART ENOUGH TO GET RID OF BUGS AN' WEEDS AN' TYRANTS - BUT, IN THE MEANTIME, WE GOTTA HATE THEM AN' FIGHT THEM WITH ALL OUR MIGHT!
GLORYOSKY, ZERO - EVERY TIME I SEE MR. OLIVER WALKIN' AROUND I SAY TO MYSELF, "ISN'T EVERYTHING GRAND"
4-29
LAST WEEK, JUST 'CAUSE HE HELPED A POOR LITTLE KID WHO WAS SICK, TWO POLICEMEN ARRESTED MR. OLIVER FOR PRACTICING MEDICINE WHEN HE DIDN'T HAVE ANY LICENSE
AN' WHEN I SAW 'EM TAKING MR. OLIVER AWAY TO JAIL, I GOT THE WIM WAMS SO BAD I THOUGHT I WAS GONNA DIE - ALL THE KIDS WERE BAWLIN' JUST LIKE I WAS -
DARRELL McCLURE
BUT WHEN MR. OLIVER SHOWED THE JUDGE A LICENSE PAPER THAT SAID HE WAS A REALLY, TRULY DOCTOR - ALL US KIDS HOLLERED, "HURRAY, HURRAY" - 'CAUSE IT MADE US FEEL GLAD ALL OVER
HA, HA - I WAS JUST THINKING - VEGETABLES ARE LIKE PEOPLE - POTATOES HAVE EYES - CORN HAS EARS - CABBAGES HAVE HEADS AND - GEE - I WAS THINKIN' 'BOUT VEGETABLES, TOO -
ONLY, I WAS THINKIN' VEGETABLES WERE JUST LIKE MONEY - WHEN YOU PUT A NICKEL'S WORTH OF SEED IN THE GROUND - IT'S JUST LIKE PUTTIN' MONEY IN THE BANK -
- 'CAUSE AFTER A WHILE, EACH SEED CHANGES INTO A CARROT THAT'S WORTH TWO OR THREE CENTS -
SO THE FIVE PENNIES YOU PUT INTO THE GROUND KEEP ON GROWIN' BIGGER AN' BIGGER UNTIL YOU REAP YOUR HARVEST AN' FIND YOUR FIVE LITTLE PENNIES HAVE GROWN INTO FIVE BIG, SILVER DOLLARS - ISN'T IT GRAND!
4-30
DARRELL McCLURE
MY GOODNESS, I THINK BAKED BEANS ARE NICE
I LIKE ALL KINDS OF BEANS - STRING BEANS - WAX BEANS - LIMA BEANS AND JUST BEANS!
OLD MR. HOAN TOLD ME THAT BEANS ARE THE POOR MAN'S CAVIAR - AND JUST BECAUSE BEANS ARE CHEAP AND PLENTIFUL, THEY NEVER GET THE CREDIT THEY DESERVE
I JUST LOVE ALL KINDS OF BEANS - BEAN SOUP - BEAN SALAD AN' -
HA, HA - I ENJOY BEANS VERY MUCH -
5-1
ESPECIALLY WHEN THEY'RE IN A BEAN BAG!!
DARRELL McCLURE
GEE, IT'S RAININ' CATS AN' DOGS - OH, EXCUSE ME, ZERO - I DON'T REALLY MEAN THAT DOGS WE'RE FALLIN' DOWN OUTA THE SKY LIKE RAINDROPS
FOLKS SEZ IT'S RAININ' CATS AN' DOGS WHEN THE RAIN IS COMIN' DOWN HARD - I DUNNO WHY THEY SAY IT, BUT THEY DO - RAIN IS GOOD FOR VEGETABLES -
5-2
IF THE CARROTS AN' ONIONS AN' THINGS DON'T GET WATER, THEY ALL WITHER UP AN' DIE - BUT WHEN IT RAINS, THE VEGETABLES FEEL GLAD ALL OVER -
AN' THEY START GROWIN' FAST AS LIGHTNING - SO THAT'S WHY WHEN IT RAINS, ALL THE KIDS WHO OWN VICTORY FARMS ARE SO HAPPY THEY JUMP UP AN' DOWN AN' HOLLER, "HURRAY, HURRAY"!
